

Wendy Martin

Executive Project Manager and
Statewide Drought Coordinator

California Department of Water Resources

Wendy Martin has nearly 30 years experience working on a wide range of water policy issues in California. Currently, she is an Executive Project Manager with the California Department of Water Resources working at the executive policy level on complex and controversial Delta water resources issues. In June 2008 Wendy was also asked to serve as the department's Statewide Drought Coordinator overseeing all of DWR's drought activities and leading the department's efforts in preparing for the possibility of a third dry year.

Prior to returning to DWR in March 2008, Wendy served as the Chief Deputy Director of the CALFED Bay-Delta Program for more than 10 years overseeing the implementation of water management and ecosystem restoration programs in the California Delta and its watershed.
